This Letter invokes clause 3 in the "Attachment C: Business Terms" of the previous Agreement between ACS and the California Digital Library with an initial term ending December 31, 2010.

Clause 3 reads: "At the end of the current three-year contract term, Licensee will have the option to extend the Agreement for an additional two-year period at a maximum capped increase of [REDACTED] per year (plus a fee of [REDACTED] for new titles). Licensee understands that a [REDACTED] increase in 2011 and 2012 [or, an increase of [REDACTED] per year over a five year period 2008-2012] and a [REDACTED] new title fee in 2011 and 2012 is currently considered necessary by ACS to complete Licensee's transition to the ACS's new pricing model.

Both parties agree to extend the terms of the previous agreement in it's entirety, including the ACS Terms & Conditions, with the following modifications:

- The business terms for 2011 access to ACS are details in Attachment A for both the University of California system and the campuses of the California State University. Campuses of the California State University are included in the terms of this agreement through Section 2, paragraph a.
- Rights to ACS Web Editions content for Licensee are covered under the ACS Terms & Conditions, Section 3, paragraph c. For the purposes of invoking these rights, ACS agrees to consider Licensee to have subscribed to ACS Chemical Neuroscience and Journal of Physical Chemistry Letters for all participating institutions and campuses in 2010. Per the business terms in Attachment A, participating institutions and campuses will subscribe to all 38 ACS Web Editions published in 2011.
- In 2011, ACS agrees to provide a print copy of the Journal of Chemical Education to all institutions and campuses with web subscription access to this journal [REDACTED]
- ACS recognizes the right of any participating institution to cancel access to Chemical & Engineering News Online in 2012. Any cancelation of access must be communicated to ACS prior to December 1, 2011.
